Government.

"The world is governed too much"—so say a certain class of politicians. We are not so sure about it. We think it possible there may be a mistake in the matter. It is rather our impression that the world is not governed enough. If it were governed considerably more, we think it might be vastly better for it, and better for us all.

That the world is mis-governed to much, is more probable—indeed, quite certain. It is mis-governed widely, sadly, disastrously; and the effects of this mis-government are visible in every stage of human existence, from infancy upward—in every sphere of life and action—in nearly all the varying phases of human conduct.

The word "government," in its essential signification, seems fairly to involve some-what more than is generally credited to it in the dictionaries. It properly means, not the wholly arbitrary and often unjust direction, control, and restraint exercised by organized society or individuals,—but a due and right control, a just and salutary restraint, and a safe and proper guidance and protection. There is some sense, and a foreshadowing of security, in such an idea of "government."

That the world is meant to signify and include this fullness of meaning, is evident from the very existence and structure of its opposite—"misgovernment"—which clearly means a defective, vicious, or perverted method of governing, as distinguished from the correct method. To "govern," therefore, in whatever sphere or department of human affairs, is to "rule in righteousness"—to comply, in the fullest sense, with both the letter and spirit of the divine requirement. "He that ruleth over men must be just."

To mis-govern, is to govern erroneously, viciously, injuriously to the rights and interests of the community, which is sometimes a great deal worse than not to make any pretence of governing at all. Alas, how long and grievously have the nations suffered from mis-government, in the ages that have gone before us! And over how vast a proportion of the earth's surface, and to how many hundreds of millions of her children do the blighting and darkening influences of mis-government still extend!

To say, therefore, that "the world is governed too much," is either to mis-state a very obvious and important fact, or to talk nonsense. The world is not governed too much, nor yet enough; and we fear it is not likely to be, for a long time to come. There is not enough individual reflection, and self-control—not half enough respect for the golden rule, and for the great eternal rule of right—not anything like an adequate and pervading sense of the paramount obligations of truth, duty and humanity, in the hearts and lives of men. And how should even the freest and best government be reasonably expected to prove any better than the people who organize, uphold and control it?

The Cincinnati Commercial's Lexington (Ky.) correspondent, speaking of the attendance of ladies at the late Fair in that place, says: "The dressing, as a general thing, is in exquisite taste—a trifle low in the neck, perhaps, but not lower than would be worn almost anywhere else where such shoulders exist. We saw two voluptuous looking ladies who rather dropped below the standard out—so much lower, indeed, that all the infants in the vicinity, in eager anticipation of the enjoyment of certain lacteal delights, instinctively stretched out their arms and began to cry vociferously."

Holloway's Pills and Ointment.—Vitality of work.—As a precaution against being poisoned by vile counterfeits of these renowned preparations, see that on every leaf of the books of directions enclosing the boxes and pots, the words, "Holloway, New York and London," are impressed in the form of a watermark, distinguishable when the paper is held up to the light. The aggregate of cures of indigestion, bowel complaints, fever and ague, remittent fever, eruptions, ulcers, contusions, rheumatism, etc., achieved by these preparations during 1857, exceeds by one hundred per cent. that of any former year. The demand in this country has increased enormously during the same period.

Twenty-six years ago, the corner stone of a monument to Washington was laid, with great ceremony, in Philadelphia. Nothing has since been done, but now there is a prospect that the matter will be taken in hand and the monument completed.

Dr. Franklin, speaking of education, says, "It is a man's business to put his hands into his pockets and take it away from him. An investment in knowledge always pays the best interest."

Enough to buy several barrels of flour, one hundred bushels of coal, one barrel of sugar, one sack of coffee, a good coat & respectable dress, and half a dozen pair of shoes—more or less.

LOCAL NEWS.

Chronicles for the Times.
 BOOK II.

1 Behold this was that which was said of the men of this city, even that which was written in the first book. And behold it was not true.
 2 And it was on this wise: Certain men did come from a great city lying at the west a day's journey, called Gotham.
 3 And did follow these strangers even as the jackal doth precede the lion;
 4 And did open stores wherein they did sell all manner of merchandize,
 5 And the price they did set upon their goods was great, inasmuch that all men did marvel thereat.
 6 And they said Behold how these men do charge; for they did not know them and supposed they were citizens of the town.
 7 So it came to pass that men did say grievous things against those that were honest and disposed to deal fairly, for the evil that these men of Gotham did do.
 8 And it came to pass that the men of the town, even those who did deal honest and fair, were grieved at the evil which was spoken against them.
 9 And did put their heads together to see how this thing could be stopped.
 10 And one said this thing, and another said that.
 11 And there were divers opinions.
 12 Now there arose one among them more wise than the others, and after this manner did he speak:
 13 Men and brethren: this evil hath long been growing upon us, till it hath become too grievous to be borne.
 14 An evil report hath gone abroad concerning the people of this town, and we have not risen up to gainsay it.
 15 Now let every man of us whose business is buying and selling sign a compact.
 16 And let this compact be that we will set a mark, even a black one, upon every man whose course of trading doth not square with justice and equity.
 17 Thus shall this stain be wiped from our escutcheon, and men cease to speak evil of our town.
 18 And it came to pass that those that listened did say that it was good.
 19 And did determine to expel from among them those that by unfair trading did bring an evil name upon the town.
 20 Thus endeth the second book of the Chronicles by Doremus the sojourner.

ROBBERY ON BOARD A VESSEL.—Saturday night, some person or persons went on board the sloop Branch, anchored in the harbor, and stole therefrom the main sheet rope and a hawser. They also broke into the vessel's cabin, damaging the companion way very badly. As the vessel is laid up, the amount of booty obtained in the cabin will not enrich the thief to a very remarkable extent. Capt. John Mahony, the owner of the vessel, offers a reward of five dollars for the detection and conviction of the thief.

By reference to our advertising columns, it will be seen that the 26th music class, under the instruction of Dr. Wood, will be organized on Thursday, Nov. 11, in Harmony Hall—over Messrs. Taylor & Stanton—Thames Street. This Hall will be very convenient to the street, is being fitted up in a neat manner, and when completed will be admirably adapted to musical purposes, lectures and similar meetings. The indications now are that a large class will be organized.

We learn that the members of the Marlborough Street Methodist Church last Sabbath presented to Mr. Eben Tourjee a silver goblet.

There will be a Men's Union Prayer Meeting at Music Hall, No. 1 Church st., at twelve o'clock, for one hour.

WOOD'S HAIR RESTORATIVE.—This is said to be a most excellent preparation, the result of extensive scientific research, and is used with great success. However venerable a bald head may appear, it is seldom considered as either comfortable or elegant, and those thus afflicted should try Prof. Wood's Restorative, and be enabled to rejoice once more in the plenitude of nature's greatest ornament.

CAUTION.—Beware of worthless imitations as several are already in the market, called by different names. Use none unless the words (Professor Wood's Hair Restorative, Depot St. Louis, Mo., and New York), are blown in the bottle. Sold by all Druggists and Patent Medicine dealers, also by all Fancy and Toilet Goods dealers in the United States and Canada.

The Danville Republican tells of a lady, named Butler, in Caswell co., N. C., whose child recently fell into a well sixty feet deep. She seized hold of the rope attached to the water bucket, went to the bottom of the well, took the child in her arms, and then ascended the rope, bringing the child along with her—an unparalleled feat.

The drought in Virginia is so severe that at Norfolk all the cisterns have become exhausted, and the citizens of Suffolk are forced to send three miles to the canal for water to drink—an event that was never before known by the oldest inhabitants of that town.

The canary bird which was saved from the wreck of the ill-fated Central America, is dead. He has been stuffed and placed in a glass case for preservation.

WHAT'S TO PAY WITH THE WIDOWS.—It is stated, in the English papers, that more widows married within the last six months, in England and Ireland, than within the previous six years.

The Devil Broke Loose.

The New York Police Gazette publishes a description of the return trip of the pack of ruffians from that city who visited the late prize fight between Morrissey and Heenan. On reading it, one is led almost to regret that a fearful railroad accident did not occur and sweep these vermin from the earth.
 Before leaving Buffalo several of these gentry, held an important meeting, at which it was settled that they should start for the city by the Central railroad, and that no man should pay anything for his fare or his provisions and luxuries by the way. Acting upon this, they took the forward cars of the train, to the number of one hundred and fifty, filling three cars, and when the conductor demanded their tickets they presented loaded revolvers instead.

To pass away the time and raise money for their expenses, they fell to gambling on the cars, forcibly taking a lady's shawl from her shoulders to serve as a table. Some fat young gentlemen among the passengers, who were afraid of their lives if they didn't play, did so, and lost $5, $10, $15 and $20. That was their only passport of safety in the crowd. In the meantime the "knucks," when it was possible, created a squabble or a "push," and in the confusion some one was sure to lose his watch or his pocket-book.

The conductor had telegraphed all over the route describing the character of his passengers, so that when they arrived at Rochester every place was closed against them. Here a stratagem was attempted to get rid of them, by requesting them to take the hind cars, but they dropped on this in a minute, and told the conductor they would see him first in a particularly hot region. If so inclined, he cut some of the cars off, but they shouldn't be in them. And they occupied their all positions. Every little village they stopped at, a portion of the crowd would get out, and a rush was made for the first grocery store for liquors and cigars. The former they helped themselves to freely; and when a box of cigars was laid before them, they did not take time to pick out a favorite, but put the box coolly under their arm and walked out of the store with it without paying anything. If a word was said, the ugly muzzle of a pistol was brought to light. In some instances stores were nearly gutted, and while the unfortunate storekeeper was wrangling, they reached over the counter and secured the till. The perishable stuff was public property when it reached the cars, as it was well known a fresh supply could be had at the first stopping point that had an open store in it.

At Syracuse there was a change of conductors. The new conductor, who is described as a perfect gentleman in manners, address and bearing, mild and persuasive, free from bluster or intimidation; a man, in fact who wished to carry out the golden rule and do as he would wish to be done by. This conductor came along, opened the door of the carriage, surveyed it a moment, and finally entered, all smiles and pleasantry. "Tickets, gentlemen, your tickets," said the conductor, in his loudest tone.

"Out of here, you son of—, or we'll shoot you," was the answer the conductor received, and at the same time three cocked revolvers were pointed at his head. "Gentlemen, gentlemen," exclaimed the conductor, imploringly, and as livid as a corpse, "don't shoot, for God's sake! Put them down and I'll give you all tickets."

"I knew we could rough him," said one of the crowd, as he put his shooter up. "Give all the boys through tickets."

The conductor, too glad to escape with his life, obeyed instructions, and, as he passed each one of the crowd, he furnished him with a ticket.

Utica, by some oversight of the conductor had not been forewarned. Arriving there, the crowd at once proceeded to the first hotel, to the number of about eighty, called for a meal, fed upon the best the house afforded, abused the waiters, and when the landlord, at the close, courteously demanded the pay, fifty cents per man, they coolly knocked him down and departed. But the crowning disgrace, which is almost beyond belief, remains yet to be told. At one of the depots two respectable ladies entered and took seats in the cars with the "roughs." The train soon moved out, and the "roughs" got up and fastened the doors at each end of the car. The ladies were helpless, without protection, and beyond their reach. Scenes too beastly to describe were enacted. The ladies were insulted in every conceivable manner and form; their persons were all but outraged; men exposed their nakedness and danced before these women. And yet, in this enlightened age and country, where woman is supposed to be so fully protected, all this happened—all these scenes were enacted, and yet nobody dared to interfere.

If the devil when he gets these men does not assign them the hottest place in his hottest furnace, he will deserve to be banished from his own dominions.

A man in King-ton, Canada, is engaged in walking 1,600 half miles in the snow number of half hours.

Although one swallow will not make a summer, still, a pin maliciously inserted in a chair will make one spring.

J. WOOD & CO.—Gents: As I have been engaged to sell your Hair Restorative for the season for one of our local agents (R. Stockton), and having experienced the beneficial effects of it myself, I would like to join an agency for the State of Ohio or the State in the West, should you wish to make such an arrangement, as I am convinced it is as useful and equal to it in the United States, for restoring the hair. I have been in the Drug business for several years, and have sold various preparations for excrescent organs or invigorators that restores life to yours. Being fully convinced that your Restorative is what you represent it to be, I will engage in the sale of it, for I am satisfied it must sell.

Yours truly,
S. T. STOCKMAN.
